DEAD SOLDIERS BROUGHT HOME

Remains of Bodies of 75 Unsung Heroes to Arrive
Here Thursday

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The bodies of 75 unsung heroes, which have lain almost forgotten in lonely graves along the Trans-Siberian railroad in Russia since the Armistice, are coming home tomorrow.

They are the remains of gallant doughboys who were sent to defend Archangel, the ice-kissed seaport of Russia, in 1919. They were members of 339th Infantry, 301th Engineers, 337th Ambulance and 337 Field Hospital Units.

When the liner President Roosevelt bearing the bodies arrives, probably tomorrow, the very highest governmental honors will be paid. A destroyer will meet the ship off Ambrose light and nine airplanes will assist in escorting the funeral vessel portward.

Twenty-one guns, reserved for presidents and royal visitors, will roar out a national salute as the cortege passes Governors Island. A guard of honor will be mounted over the bodies when they are taken ashore.

REVIVE HOPE FOR EILESON

Smoke Seen Near Uninhabited
North Cape May Have Been Lost Flyer

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(INS)—Hope that Ben Eileson, missing Arctic aviator, may still be alive was strengthened today following receipt of a telegram from Alaska by Graham B. Grosvenor, president of the Aviation Corporation, stating that smoke had been seen in uninhabited foothills near North Cape.

The telegram signed by Frank Dorban, who is aiding in the search for Eileson, read as follows:

"Another team (dog team) arrived at North Cape from Kolu-chin Bay, reported seeing smoke in foothills 36 miles from North Cape. No natives in that district. Probably Eileson. Prevented from going to spot by unfavorable weather and shortage of dog food. Returning to search. Russian planes leaving from Providence Bay for North Cape will look for Eileson."

The telegram was sent from Teller, Alaska, and was dated November 26.

GARAGE MAN FOUND DEAD

Monoxide Gas Causes Death of Bill Wiltshire of Chillicothe

Eldred L. "Bill" Wiltshire, 30, proprietor of Studebaker garage, W. Main-st., Chillicothe, was found dead Wednesday at 6:25 a. m. when his salesman, Fred Weinrich, who is also his brother-in-law, opened the front door leading to the street. When Weinrich went into the garage he heard the phone ringing and it was Mrs. Wiltshire calling, trying to locate her husband. Carbon monoxide gas caused death.

Mr. and Mrs. Wiltshire had been at a turkey party at the Elk's lodge the night before and on the way home, Wiltshire said he wanted to stop at the garage and work on a car. Mrs. Wiltshire was taken home and he returned to the garage.

When he was found, the machine had hood off, motor running and the lights turned on. He is thought to have been dead about three hours.

REFUGEES ARE SUFFERERS IN CHINESE WAR

Far East Government Asks
World Powers to Halt
Russian Attacks

PEKING, Nov. 27.—While the Chinese government awaited the results of its appeal to both the League of Nations and the individual signatories of the Kellogg Pact to take steps to halt the Soviet "invasion" of Manchuria, tales of the privations of residents of the war-torn area poured in here today.

More than 10,000 Chinese and several hundred Russian refugees from the Hailar and Dalainor are now in Harbin where most of them are being cared for by the Russo-American relief committee.

Bombs from Soviet planes terrorized both the civilian population of the invaded districts and the defending Chinese forces. Large areas were devastated by fires resulting from the bombs.

But the refugees suffered their greatest hardships in attempting to get to Harbin, the Chinese Eastern Railway placed all available train at the disposal of the refugees.

Panic-stricken soldiers of the demoralized retreating Chinese army, however, ousted the refugees from many of these trains and hundreds were forced to walk part of the distance to Harbin along the railroad tracks.

Those on the trains suffered other privations. Many were without food during the entire trip of 300 miles.

Some were forced to ride on open flat cars or on the roofs of freight cars suffered greatly from exposure.

Chinese officers were unable to control their troops, according to the refugees, and wholesale looting by marauding bands of soldiers resulted.

Chinese losses since the Russian drive began have been extremely heavy. The Nationalist headquarters at Tsihsair estimated that 4,000 Chinese soldiers were killed and 2,000 wounded in attempting to repel the invaders, but other sources place the casualties at much higher figures.

The Russian troops are now reported to be continuing forward at a leisurely pace, having practically no opposition to face. They are fast approaching the foothills of the Kiangnan mountains.

Soviet planes, now operating from bases more than 100 miles inside the Manchurian border, continue their air demonstrations far into Chinese territory.

ASHVILLE BUSINESS MEN JOIN C. OF C. IN EXCELLENT MEETING

A real step toward community good feeling was taken Tuesday evening when 12 Asheville business men met with the local Chamber of Commerce in the Chamber's rooms in one of the finest meetings conducted by the local organization in recent years. A few more meetings of this type would be to the advantage of everyone concerned.

The meeting opened, naturally, with a fine chicken supper. Pres. A. C. Moore opened the evening's program when he introduced Harry Stevenson as chairman for the evening.

Stevenson introduced Dr. J. L. Spindler, Asheville's mayor, who after giving a few words of appreciation for being invited to the meeting, introduced each of the members of the Asheville delegation.

They were: Dr. C. J. Rocky, dentist; George Massick, furniture dealer; L. E. Foreman Chevrolet dealer; G. A. Hook, general store; C. W. Squires, department store; Everett W. Seeds, banker; F. G. Hudson, insurance; E. F. Schlegel, undertaker; George Stoker, editor, and J. R. Hedges, lumber dealer.

Dr. Spindler failed to introduce the speaker of the evening, but after telling a few jokes on Englishmen, and one particular Englishman, again called on Mr. Stevenson.

Stevenson told a joke of two on an Englishman, and then naming him as the subject of all the jokes told, introduced Rev. William Alexander, of the South Bloomfield M. E. Church, as the speaker.

And when Mr. Alexander started telling his jokes the rest of the joke tellers didn't dare say another word.

Rev. Alexander told English jokes, Scotch jokes, and whatever kind of jokes could be found, and from the time he started his talk until he ended the Chamber rooms

PILGRIMS HAD NATION'S 1ST THANKSGIVING

Many Persons Compare Plight
Of Pilgrims With 1929
Conditions

Thinking persons pause at this time of year to find cause for thanksgiving and in this day and age they do not have far to go.

Comparison of the plight of the Pilgrims with the conditions of the present day Americans involves the portrayal of two extremes. The Pilgrims from the time they arrived at Cape Cod in the winter of 1620 until the following summer underwent the most grueling hardships. Their little band was swept by the grim reaper, comforts were few and far between and those who were alive were mostly ill. In fact, according to Governor Bradford's history of the Plymouth Settlement, there were times when out of the entire colony there were only six or seven sound persons.

The Indians gave the Pilgrims no end of trouble and constituted an ever present menace to their health and happiness. The first winter in this country of this brave band of pioneers was one of extreme hardship and it was with feeling of relief that they saw the days lengthen and the Spring come. The gathering of the first crop gave rise to a spirit of celebration and Governor Bradford in 1621 decreed a day of Thanksgiving. This day was set aside to thank God for the blessings of the year and was a long remembered event.

From Plymouth, the Thanksgiving custom spread to other colonies, until, in the time of the government, or of each, issued a special Thanksgiving proclamation annually. During the Revolutionary war Thanksgiving Days were observed after signal victories or wonderful deliverances from danger. For many years, however, there was no uniform Thanksgiving Day.

Agitation to this end was carried on by Mrs. Sarah Josepha Hale, editor of Godey's Lady Book, whose efforts were rewarded in 1863 when President Lincoln appointed the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving Day. Mrs. Hale went down in history as the "Mother of Thanksgiving Day."

We moderns have considerably more to be thankful for than our forefathers. Where they were forced to put up with the most makeshift of housing conveniences and with the crudest form of house heating, we have splendidly built houses, luxuriously furnished and heated by steam. Where the Pilgrims had no such conveniences as steam and electric railways, electric lights and radios. Their lives were simple, and their pleasures few and far between. Despite the scarcity of comforts and the lack of conveniences they were sincerely and truly thankful that they were alive, that their crops had been successful and that they were in a new country which they were proud to develop.

AUTHORITIES WARN SPEEDING DRIVERS

Many Complaints Made on Truck Drivers Exceeding
Limit in County

Many complaints have reached the office of Sheriff Frank Davis in the last week of truck drivers operating their conveyances at an excessive rate of speed on the township, county and state roads within Pickaway-co.

Davis warned Wednesday that drivers who persist in speeding on the roads will be prosecuted.

No truck used for hauling property is permitted by law to exceed 25 miles an hour, while the load, the lower the speed limit it is. The limit for many of the big trucks used in this county are limited to 15 miles an hour while it has been reported they sometimes travel 30 and 35 miles an hour.

Devotee of Mystic Cult Sought by Entire State,

Thanksgiving To Be Celebrated At Institutions

A visit to three of the Pickaway-

co. institutions on Thanksgiving Day would reveal an interesting diversity in Thanksgiving dinner menus. While the more fortunate of Pickaway-co residents are enjoying dinner in their homes, the meals in the institutions would compare favorably with those served in the majority of private houses.

At the Pickaway-co jail, there will be roast chicken, served by Mrs. Frank Davis. The occupants of the jail shouldn't complain of this fare received free gratis, for being drunk and disorderly, stealing automobiles, or chickens, and what have you? The chicken thieves may not enjoy the roast legitimate fowls as much as those other offenders.

With the fowl done to a turn, will be served dressing, sweet potatoes, mashed potatoes and gravy, cranberries or celery, and bread and butter and coffee.

The children at the Pickaway-co home will be served a Thanksgiving dinner of roast duck. The entire menu will consist of mashed potatoes, oyster dressing, cranberries, celery, bread and butter and pumpkin pie. Mr. and Mrs. Goodchild are in charge of the children's home.

There is still another institution in the county where Thanksgiving Day will be observed. At the county infirmary the residents will enjoy a plentiful dinner of roast backbone, with oyster dressing, mashed potatoes, sweet potatoes, gravy, celery and cranberries. Mr. and Mrs. Harley Mowery have charge of the infirmary.

POSSIBILITIES OF BUSINESS TO BE TOPIC

Young, Insull, Mitchell And
Other Financiers Present
At Meeting

By GEORGE E. HOLMES
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The utilities kings of the country, headed by Owen D. Young, Samuel Insull, Sidney Z. Mitchell, and others whose names are by-words in big finance, went into conference with President Hoover this morning to discuss what contribution their gigantic corporations can make in the effort at business stabilization.

They came to Washington today following a meeting in New York yesterday, at which it is understood a general program of expansion and capital expenditure was decided upon.

The utilities conference marked the end of President Hoover's personal leadership in the effort to coordinate the business interests of the country toward a national program calculated to offset the radical decline in securities prices.

Hereafter the job of keeping the business machinery of the country in high gear will be turned over to the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and its sub-divisions, and to the various trade associations.

A glimpse of what the utilities interests are planning for 1930 was furnished by Matthew S. Egan, president of the New York Edison company, and also of the National Electric Light Association.

Electric Light and Power companies, gas, and electric railways utilities, Sloan said, are planning expenditures of $1,400,000,000 during 1930, which is an increase of $110,000,000 over the present year, and to this figure should be added $410,000,000 in ordinary maintenance expenditures.

The list of 36 utilities leaders to include such organizations and developers as Samuel Insull of the Commonwealth Edison Company, Chicago; Frederick L. Davis, president of the North American company, Philadelphia; W. A. Jones, vice president of the Cities Service company, New York; Paul S. Clapp, executive secretary of the National Electric Light Association; and Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric company.

The members of the utilities committee were named late yesterday at a utilities conference at New York, and represent all phases of the utilities field.

Mr. Hoover will take part in still one more meeting, that of the board of directors and members of the United States Chamber of Commerce, called for Dec. 3, at that request, when he will make the opening address of the conference, it is anticipated, will result in the establishment of a permanent "business council" to carry on policies intimated by the president.

In addition to those named today's utilities conference membership will include:

S. Z. Mitchell, electric bond and share company, New York City; Charles L. Edgar, Edison electric illuminating company; B. C. Cobb, chairman, allied power and light company; Thomas M. McCarter, public service electric and gas, Newark, N. J.; G. E. Groshock, president, electric bond and share company; Haljord Erickson, vice president, Bylesby engineering and management corporation, Chicago; George M. Kidd, president, American gas and electric company, New York; John P. Zimmerman, president, United gas improvement company, Philadelphia; P. G. Gessler, president, and W. W. Freeman, vice president, Columbia gas and electric company, New York; George B. Cortelyou, president, consolidated gas company of New York, New York; Lucas S. Storr, former chairman of the board, United railway and electric company, Baltimore; John B. Miller, chairman, southern California Edison company, Los Angeles; Floyd L. Carlisle, chairman, N. E. power corporation, New York; Herbert A. Wagener, consolidated gas, electric light and power company, Baltimore; S. Sloan, president, Omaha and Council Bluffs, New York; J. N. Shanahan, president, Omaha and Council Bluffs street railway, Omaha.

Following an annual custom, there will be no publication of THE CIRCLEVILLE HERALD on Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, to permit our employees to enjoy the holiday.

THIS AND THAT

By W. M. Reid
THE COTTON TAIL

Hunters, have you ever noticed that most of the rabbits you bag are males? If so, do you know why it is so? Rabbits do not mate till late in the winter.

During fall and early winter the females or does are holed up in ground-hog holes or other refuges and do not allow the males to come near. They come out in the evenings and early mornings to feed.

This fact is noticeable when there is a snow upon the ground. Near the refuges will be found many tracks, the snow packed, but no rabbits sitting out.

Toward spring in the breeding season go into the same locality and there numerous rabbits may be found. If one should be taken at this time it is usually a doe.

The male will either be in holes or sitting close to the hole ready to pop in when the hunter appears or a doe comes into the vicinity, as the female is a vicious beast at this period.

Recently, while taking out nature study classes we noticed through the winter a dearth of rabbits in a certain locality. We were fortunate if we saw two or three in an hour's trip. Along toward spring we began to observe them in greater numbers. A count was made and at the end of the period 30 rabbits were started up by the class. It was observed also, that a few darted immediately into holes that were near, but the majority scampered away across the fields.

The cotton tail or gray rabbit is a true rabbit. Its range is from the Great Lakes to Mexico, east of the Alleghenies. It is a swift runner for a short distance, but soon wearies.

With a few inches of snow upon the ground it is possible for a boy to soon run a rabbit down and capture it with his hands.

The Jack Rabbit of the Great Plains is not a rabbit but a hare. He is a runner par excellence. Nothing but a greyhound or a coyote is able to equal his pace.

There are usually only two young in a litter of hares, while in a litter of rabbits may be found from four to eight young. Often three litters are raised in a year, and if not kept in check by birds of prey, such as hawks and owls, and by carnivorous animals, would become a pest.

Years ago in Australia a few English rabbits were taken there multiplying rapidly, and having no natural enemies they soon became a menace to the live stock industry on that continent. At present men are employed by the government there to destroy them.

The teacher was giving a nature study lesson to the class. They were informed that rabbits multiplied very rapidly.

"What Are Tonsils Good For?"

Dr. Copeland's Subject Today

Science Still Trying to Settle Question of Their Worth, Says Authority, but There Is Ample Evidence of the Harm Caused by Diseased Tonsils.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

MANY persons ask "What are tonsils good for?" Well, science has not settled that question. But science does have real evidence of what damage they sometimes do.

Tonsils are made up of fibrous tissue. Deep pockets run down into the substance of the tonsil. In these pockets germs which produce poisons may be deposited. The warm mucus and food remnants are ideal materials to feed the germs. The poisons they make are taken up by the blood stream to every nook and corner of the body.

If you have pains in your joints, and perhaps any one of many other bad feelings, your doctor will say at once, "I shall look at your teeth and tonsils for focal infection." Any point in your anatomy where bacteria breed, may be the place from which poisons are spread through the circulation of the blood.

Diseased tonsils may result in rheumatism, heart disease, eye trouble, nervousness, sore throats and colds, dizziness, deafness, and many another trouble. There is no end to the sicknesses resulting from infected tonsils.

The most of us seem to hate facing the truth. Yet we all want health and happiness. If the tonsils are diseased or are not self-cleaning, we cannot have them.

Many cases of tonsil infection do not need operation. But if, after careful watching, your doctor advises an operation, you may know he is trying to save you from something much worse than a mere operation. Such organs are dangerous. It is surprising what quantities of pus may be found in a diseased tonsil. But even if the pus is small in quantity its mere presence creates a real danger to health.

In times past there have been too many tonsil operations. I am convinced now a rheumatism is largely because of a disease which is primarily in the tonsils.

gave him an idea. That evening his mother heard him talking to his pet rabbit out on the back porch. He was saying to it, "two and two, two and three" at the same time jerking its ears. "Tommy," said his mother, "why treat your bunny so roughly?" "Well, mother the teacher said that rabbits multiplied very rapidly, but this darned thing can't even add easy numbers."

In spite of prowling cats and dogs rabbits are frequently found in this city. After a light fall of snow tracks are to be seen as far in as the court house. They have been found with nests on many of the lawns of Circleville.

Dr. H. R. Clarke called my attention to one on his lawn last year. The mother rabbit digs a shallow hole in the ground for the nest, pulls some fur from her breast, and deposits her blind hairless young in it, covers them up level with the surrounding surface. It can scarcely ever be discovered except by accident, so carefully has it been made to blend with the surrounding surface. Feeding usually takes place in the early evening and early morning hours. In a few weeks the young are able to take care of themselves.

A rabbit's fore legs are unlike those of others of the rodent family to which it belongs. A squirrel can hold a nut in its paws while gnawing it. The arrangement of the bones in a rabbit's fore legs will not allow it to do so.

When a rabbit sometimes stands on its hind legs the forepaws hang down uselessly. When running, it seems that the sole use of the forelegs are to hold the fore parts till the powerful hind legs can be thrust forward for the powerful spring he makes sometimes as much as 20 feet or more. For that reason you always see the two larger foot prints ahead of the smaller ones.

Boys often complain to me that rabbits caught in their steel traps escape, leaving a foot in the jaws of the trap. If they persist in catching rabbits, a more merciful and less painful method is to wrap the jaws of the trap in cloth strips. By this method the bones are not so easily broken and not so much pain is inflicted.

Wily Elephant

Though tigers and leopards cannot, as a class be said to slay death, there have been instances in which one of the latter has slain a tiger. In one instance a tiger had been slain and been very much alive, until finally despatched. There is an instance on record of a newly captured elephant playing the "artful dodger" so successfully that it completely deceived its captors, who releasing its bonds, left it for dead; but scarcely had they gone a little distance when, to their amazement, the creature rose, and trumpeting loudly, made good its escape.

Fruit Tree From Seed

If a fruit tree grows from a seed eventually it will bear fruit, all conditions being favorable. However, the chances are greatly against the fruit resembling that of the parent tree exactly.

Editor Years Ago Took

Fling at Vast Wealth

The concentration of wealth in the United States was looked upon fearfully as far back as 1893. That year the Washington (N. J.) Star made this editorial comment according to Chapter's Weekly:

"Alexander T. Stewart, the merchant prince, clears $1,000 a day, Sunday excepted, the rest round, Cornelius Vanderbilt pleads guilty to twice that sum. William B. Astor rates his income at $4,320 per diem; sleeping or waking, he and a $2 bill dropping into his hat every minute of the 24 hours. At every turn cash stares at him in the most insidious manner. Books fine their dividends at his head; ruthless bankers beat him with coupons; unquitting and soulless corporations dump their lucre at his doorstep, and contemptuous bill stickers plaster his door with green backs. 'He might wonder what he had done to merit such treatment. The only charge that can be brought is that he is a rich man's son and therefore must suffer.'"

Delicious Tropical Fruit

The granadilla is a tropical American fruit, oval shape, of a greenish yellow color. The pulp is water-colored and has a sweet smell and a pleasant sweet acid taste, but contains many black seeds. The plant is grown in conservatories in North America and Europe for the lovely blossoms.

Look With Disfavor on

Abnormality of Genius

The aberrations of genius have not invariably confined themselves to mere feats of mental absent-mindedness. The lives of Bunyan, Swift, Byron, Beethoven and even Thomas Carlyle are examples of the tragic forms which the abnormality of genius will sometimes assume. Genius, especially musical, poetic and literary genius, has often been allied with a pathological condition of the mind which borders upon insanity. And the fact that the eccentricity of genius did not more frequently cross the border line must be attributed to the social conditions under which those men of genius lived; for society in the past was more tolerant of eccentricity than it is today.

And here, perhaps, is the real cause of the lack of genius which we are so often told, is characteristic of the present age. It is possible that the Twentieth century, with its tendency to standardize not only means of production but even ways of thought, will not tolerate that independence or eccentricity of mind which has so often been the accompaniment of creative genius. If John Bunyan, for example, had been living today, he would have been cured of his melancholy or else incarcerated in an asylum; in either case, it is safe to say, would he have produced the "Pilgrim's Progress."

Famous House Has Gone

The descendants of the Grant family still live in the vicinity of the famous John O. Grant's house, marked with the foundation lines is all that remains of the house built probably in the latter part of the Sixteenth century.

Tuning in on the Talkies

Will this "glorifying" never end? The obliging ladies of the chorus having gone the limit on external disclosures, "The Heart of a Foolies Girl" is now on view.

"Hold Your Horses" was filmed in an era when there were horses to hold.

"Love, Honor and Behave" exerts more than the usual "one thing at a time" the average man is able to accomplish.

"The Crash" may often be attributed to "The Careless Age."

"The Lady Who Lied" has been preserved in film records for the benefit of posterity.

While horses, dogs, wives and moustaches are barred from West Point, Rin Tin Tin crashes the gate because he is an actor.

"Heaven on Earth" has finally been attained. But it is only in a film title.

Here's some bad news for "Peeping Toms." "Lady Godiva" was filmed before screen queens bobbed their hair.

For "Double Feature" Day "Eve's Leaves," "Hold Everything."

Making allowance for good intentions, the music of some theme songs is not as bad as it sounds.

More Inside Information Jacqueline Logan will converse with John Barrymore in his first talkie, "General Crack."

Marian Nixon, back from honeymoon, will star in Warner Bros. production of David Belasco's stage play, "Sweet Kitty Bellairs."

"Golden Dawn" will break in the colors of nature. Walter Woolf steps from his star role on the stage to sing the star role on the screen.

Happy Family in Stable

Animals of many kinds and dispositions are living happily in the stable of a London milk distributing company. They are not only on friendly terms with the 100 horses, but with one another. Included in the private zoo are two Indian monkeys, a wild hare which has been tamed, a fox which accompanies her owner on walks about the city, and a number of rabbits, pigeons, canaries and foreign birds.

Great Commanders Not Famed as Rifle Shots

The great Napoleon, being economically minded, would have been gratified to know that his "fowling piece" brought $1,500 second-hand at a recent sale in Paris.

Bonaparte, educated as an artilleryman, was a "big gun" man in his military attitude, and depended largely on his artillery and cavalry sabres to win glory. As a handler of small arms he was a true artillerist.

The Little Corporal was a poor shot and sport did not appeal to him, perhaps for that reason. Students of the intimate details of his life recall that on one of the few occasions he went gunning for game his entire bag consisted of his favorite dog.

His great adversary, the duke of Wellington, was no better. Lady Shelley, in her memoirs, describing a hunting with him, says:

"The hero of Waterloo was a very wild shot. After wounding a retriever and peppering a keeper's gaiters, he sprinkled the hare arms of an old woman washing clothes at her cottage window."

Condor Exceeds Eagle The condor has a wing extent of 12 feet, while an eagle's is about 7 feet.

Made Good Use of Kite

The first railroad suspension bridge at Niagara was begun in 1852 by John A. Roebling and the first locomotive crossed it in March, 1855. The first suspension bridge of any kind across the Niagara gorge was built by Charles Ellet. In 1810, he offered a reward of $5 to anyone who would get a string across, and the next windy day most of the boys in the neighborhood attempted it with kites, one of them succeeding. This string was used to pull a small wire cable across.

BROWN GIVEN HEAVY FINE

Assessed $150 and Costs For Possession, Denies Driving Charge

Henry Brown, Jackson-twp, was fined $150 and costs when he pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of liquor before Judge E. A. Brown, was given until Saturday to pay his fine, and was committed to the Cincinnati workhouse unless payment is made. Brown entered a plea of not guilty to a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Henry Gather, colored, Brown's companion in an alleged escape late Saturday, pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication and was fined $25 and costs and committed to the county jail until the fine and costs are paid.

The two men were arrested by Deputy Sheriff Miller Fissell at the Colonial Carriage building late Saturday after they had driven Brown's Ford Coupe into the building, not damaging the building but badly wrecking the car.

Brown was fined $25 and costs a week ago, for intoxication, by Judge Brown.

Winter Sports Enthusiasts to Frolic at Banff Carnival

While Banff, Alberta, the capital of Rocky Mountains National Park, is an internationally famous summer resort, it is also rapidly gaining prominence as a winter rendezvous for sport-lovers—a setting for pulse-quickenings pastimes which find favor these days with young and old alike. Each year during February Banff stages her Winter Carnival, a festa of fun and frolic, with mile-high mountains as a setting. The 1930 Carnival, which is to be presided over by Miss Gwen Smallpiece of Calgary, will be held Feb. 1-8, inclusive. It promises to be bigger and better than ever, and lovers of winter sports are planning to attend. Miss Smallpiece, who was crowned 1930 Carnival Queen at the conclusion of last year's affair is an expert snow-shoer, skier, and hockey player, as well as a proficient summer and horsewoman, and should therefore feel at home as Queen of the Snows at Banff.

During the Carnival, Banff offers a comprehensive program of sports, including tobogganing on its famous mountain slide, skating, skiing, snowshoeing and all the other thrilling winter pastimes. The ski-jump at Banff is one of the finest in the world. During the Carnival, competitions are held for professionals, amateurs and boys. To watch one of the jumpers come zooming down the steep incline almost takes the spectator's breath away. Hockey, the world's fastest game, is another attraction, and keenly contested matches played by both men's and women's teams never fail to attract an enthusiastic crowd. Skating on the Bow River by moonlight is another pleasure in store for the Carnival visitor. The white mountain peaks are silhouetted against a clear, starlit sky and the keen air vibrates with laughter as graceful forms glide over glistening ice. Figure and speed skating competitions afford opportunities for enthusiasts to demonstrate their skill.

Old-fashioned sleigh-rides behind a team of prancing horses, masquerade parties, dances, fireworks near the Ice Palace, a dog-sled race, and swimming in the Cave and Basin, a hot sulphur pool on the side of Sulphur Mountain, complete the program.

N.A.A. TO FORM GLIDER CLUB

Plans to Investigate Planes Landing Near Here—Hold Regular Meetings

At a special meeting of the Circleville chapter of the National Aeronautical Association a committee was named to obtain data on the formation of a glider club. Glider clubs are being formed in many of the larger cities and it is the desire of the local organization to get a club under operation here if enough members can be secured who are interested in this exciting sport.

A committee was also appointed by the president of the local chapter, D. D. Dowden, to investigate the air marking in the city.

Another committee was appointed to investigate each airplane which lands in this vicinity and to check up on the ship's and the pilot's license. The organization feels that this step is necessary to protect the flying public.

Any ship coming here without a license will be reported to the department of Commerce and immediately grounded.

The first Monday of each month has been set as the club's meeting night the next meeting being on Monday, December 2.

Bob Brehmer, vice-president of the club, and chairman of junior activities, gave an interesting talk on model plane building and flight as constructed by the boys of the junior organization.

Tom A. Renick gave a talk on the National air races and Exposition held at Cleveland recently.

The club's meetings are being held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

The bureau of standards says that it does not consider it dangerous to go swimming when it is lightning. This does not mean that one cannot be killed by lightning while in swimming. The chances, however, of one being killed by lightning while swimming are comparable to the chances one takes while walking in a field and in an everyday working life may be considered unimportant.

"I was amazed at the way this new medicine seemed to attack the very cause of the trouble. In a very short time my stomach was in a perfect condition. My appetite was restored and I felt as if I should. My kidneys have been restored to their normal healthy condition and my head no longer aches. My back is now straight and I feel as if I have a new lease on life. I praise Konjola."

FORD ECONOMICS

The special appeal that Henry Ford makes to the nation comes from his having not only ideas, but the courage of them. When he has a new idea, whether wise or foolish, he goes right ahead and puts it into practice.

He seemed very foolish with his "peace ship" early in the war, and probably was. He seemed rash when, just a little while before the outbreak of the war, he raised his minimum wage to $5 a day, on the ground that it would be not only good for the workers but good for the whole industry, including the manufacturers. But that idea has won wide and ever-growing recognition.

Ford's policy has been consistently along this line. Now he lowers the price of his product and then prepares to raise wages again, at a time when the motor industry is threatened with dullness. Thus, he figures, he will increase the demand for his product by attacking the problem at both ends. He provides cheaper cars and more money for the people to buy them with. And this, he insists, is the key to industrial prosperity in general.

Other manufacturers hesitate, but are not so ready as they used to be to call this policy crazy. The science of economics has been revised in the last 20 years. More and more importance is attached to the buying power of the public which means mainly the buying power of labor. It has seemed true so far that business profits grow in proportion as worker's incomes grow—that neither group gains at the other's expense—that prosperity is a joint affair with them.

Most business men now recognize this in principle, merely asking how far it can be carried, and balking more or less in practice. "Ford can do it," they say, "but we can't—at least just now." Ford says they can all do it, and should, and leads the way.

MUSICAL AMERICA

According to Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, a distinguished musical critic who sets forth his views in a recently published book, America is not a musical nation.

Yes, we spend a lot of money on music. We have plenty of orchestras and concert halls. We have opera houses and support symphony orchestras. But he says all we really care for is jazz. To a mere newspaper person, looking for without special knowledge of it, it seems that Dr. Spaeth is not only needlessly gloomy, but a little behind the time. The condition he deplors did exist in this country, and not very long ago, either, but it exists no longer.

Jazz is waning. You hear less of it in dance halls and theatres, and less in radio programs. There is a great and growing demand for good music of all kinds, ranging from negro spirituals and Sousa marches to grand opera, Brahms symphonies and Beethoven sonatas. The ordinary American's musical development is proceeding with unprecedented speed, and the more he learns about music from concert halls and radio, the better music he demands.

Patience

Eight-year-old Mabel had retired early, leaving her father and mother in the living room enjoying a radio program. Some time later her mother had occasion to go into the little girl's bedroom. When she turned on the light, much to her surprise, she saw a small, pale, emaciated figure standing in the middle of her bed. Mother said:

"Why Mabel, you must be down and go to sleep."

"Mother, my teacher says, when you hear 'The Star Spangled Banner' stand up no matter where you are," Mabel explained.

Both mother and daughter remained standing while the national anthem was being broadcast.

Child Voices Not Silver

"Children's voices are not naturally beautiful," declared Geoffrey Swan, inspector of music in English training colleges, recently. "The poet who wrote about their silver voices probably didn't know any children."

IF SIZES WERE REVERSED!

"The Masked Hostess"

by BLAIR STEVENSON

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:

Upon the death of her father, "Happy" Jack Van Slaick, once wealthy sportsman and social leader, Nathalie Van Slaick, young and beautiful, finds herself left a few dollars and an old, abandoned Long Island estate called "The Firs." After being coldly repulsed by her rich aunt, Mrs. Pemberton Swayne, Nathalie in desperation cashes a check for $500 for which there are no funds. Without her knowledge, John Sloan, young lawyer, assigned to her affairs, makes the check good. Fearing that a detective is trailing her, Nathalie leaves a train at Brookville, Long Island. From the president of the local bank, a mercenary Shylock, who holds the mortgage on "The Firs," which he desires because the new state road will enhance its value, Nathalie accepts a strange proposition. It is to act as hostess at "The Firs" which is to be rented to a wealthy South American who wishes to entertain his friends. On the condition that her identity remains hidden by wearing a silken mask, Nathalie meets the handsome foreigner who turns out to be Capt. Ramon Stefano, supposedly of great wealth and much sought after by the young smart set. He does not know that he has previously met her, Nathalie, with a black transformation and Spanish costume and the mask, is unrecognizable. Sloan, in love with Nathalie, warns her of the danger she will be in due to the romantic natures of herself and Stefano. Neither of them realize that Stefano is without funds and is being supported in this venture by a mysterious expatriate engaged in shady deals. This man, Ferris, had previously trailed Nathalie seeking her estate. He finances Stefano in his strange venture, hoping to draw a visit from Nathalie. The opening of "The Firs" completely remodeled and furnished with a staff of servants, is an outstanding social success. The wealthy Long Island crowd are intrigued by the Masked Hostess. Most of them are of her own set, but Nathalie's disguise is not penetrated. Stefano keeps his word not to seek out Nathalie's identity. She sleeps in the house behind a solid steel door.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.)

CHAPTER XVII.

She bathed and dressed without the assistance of her maid, for she had determined that she would not permit any of the servants in the house to see her without her mask. Not that she did not trust her maid or the others. But she was used to servants and was well aware of their propensity for gossip, particularly about those they served or by whom they were employed. She unlocked the steel door which guarded her suite and rang for her maid when she was ready to go downstairs. The maid appeared, smiling and with her arms full of flowers. She had a message, too, for Nathalie.

"Captain Stefano's compliments, Madame, and could you grant him a few moments in the dining-room? Dinner is ready to be served and he is awaiting Madame there. He says, however, that if the time is not well chosen by him—"

"I will come down at once," Nathalie answered her and the maid smiled again and was gone. Perhaps it was the evidence and grand scale of him as a host which had left Nathalie so eager to see him again. He had been a favorite of her father's, and she had known him before his fall. Or perhaps it was because John Sloan had warned her, she and Stefano were such "romantic" and chief actors in a romantic adventure that it was with delight that she had come to join him.

He was in riding clothes. A woman was walking his horse outside the house. He looked fresh and handsome and smart and friendly as she stepped to his feet. He explained at once that he was dining elsewhere after going to the bank to draw a check. He had come back to dress and that he had come in only to leave a small message for her.

"I know," he said in his cheerful, fatherly fashion. "I was not by here earlier in the afternoon and it struck me what a dashed sorry and lonely sort of place it really is after all. Except that we're eating by way of talking right now so that it'll be daylight mostly when you're alone the main fear, I wouldn't have it on my conscience to have you sleep alone."

And so that you'll always have the upper hand, or feel that you will in any event—though goodness knows I can think of no reason why you'll ever require it, or I'd not consent to your stopping in the direction from which he had come. The candle was snuffed out clean as his bullet hit its mark. "No harm done," he assured her calmly. "You see I placed the candle this side of an open window and with a tree bole outside in line with the candle to take the bullet. All right? Here, you take the pistol and have it about you upstairs. I'll feel lighter."

He rose at once to go. Nathalie had watched him fascinated. Bred and cultured in the traditions of sportsmen, the stamp of man she had always been taught to admire. Men like him, who hunted, rode, shot and excelled outdoors, had always been her father's cronies and boon friends. She had little knowledge of men who toiled for success in business or in the professions. Worldly success and worldly possessions meant less than nothing to her, for she had been accustomed all her life to those who took possessions as a matter of course and never thought of success except in sports at all.

He, on his side, admired all women and women like Nathalie most. She spelled "blood inheritance" to him like blood horses did. His fortunes, like hers, had dwindled, although she had no guess of this. And they had dwindled because he had inherited them and had not known how to guard them. He was no common adventurer but merely an open-handed gentleman out of luck. He had

He whirled on his heels and shot in the direction from which he had come.

I did a lot of target practice. I'm really rather good!" "Capital!" cried Stefano. "So there are two of us then." He looked to the butler in Italian and the man hurried to the kitchen. "I've told him," explained Stefano, "to go to the rest of the household know that we're not making a bit of a row. Now watch—as a rule you'll enjoy this."

He picked up one of the candles on the table and waved it to the far end of the long parlor which opened off the dining-room. When he returned to Nathalie he had a big steel revolver in his hand. "Ready?" he asked, still facing her. She nodded.

DR. COPELAND SAYS— MAKE THIS HOLIDAY ONE OF JOY, HEALTH

Dr. Copeland Sends His Thanksgiving Message, Urging That This, First of Our National Holidays, Be One of Thanks and Recreation.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

As I write this my ears are made glad by the ripplings of a beautiful stream. Here I am in the back yard of the home where all my young days were spent.

It takes some weeks for these articles to get to the printer and then to you. For this reason they are prepared in advance of the time you read them.

So here I sit and project my mind forward to the frosts of November and the joys of Thanksgiving Day. You will get this message on the day preceding this, our first national holiday.

It is easy for me to picture what will take place on Thanksgiving, 1929, in Michigan the weather will be cold and blustery by late November. I have known this stream to be frozen over before Thanksgiving. Many a time I have adjusted my skates right where I am writing.

In imagination I can hear the gobbling and grumbling in the barnyard around the hill. The brothers and sisters of the head of the turkey flock are wondering where their kingly brother has gone.

But I am not wondering! I can catch the tantalizing aroma of that baking turkey! As mother opens the oven door to baste the bird the perfume rushes out to fill the air with appetizing fumes.

What a day Thanksgiving was! If the family gathering was not in the house up the hill it was held at grandfather's farm, two miles away. I can never forget those glorious holidays. Uncles and aunts, cousins by the score, and grandmother beaming on the group! What a memory!

We need these days of justification. Life must not be too staid and stupid an experience if we are to be happy and glowing with health. As I view it, it is a sad mistake to make such a business of life that a holiday seems a "waste of time."

The race is not the swift always. But even though the great is a fortune, what difference does it make if you miss it?

As a matter of fact, however you are more likely to win if you conserve your precious body. Each of us need and must have an abundance of recreation.

The very word "recreation" means "re-creation." We must have time and leisure to permit the muscles and nerves to store up new strength. There must be frequent recreations if we are to live long and have the physical endurance to fight life's battle.

Then, on the spiritual side, isn't it right, meet and our bounden duty to say our early affairs long enough on occasions to offer up to Almighty God sincere thanks for what He has given us?

Thanksgiving Day is a day for thanks to the Creator and a day to permit nature to do her work of recreation. I trust you will live up to the highest ideals of what this day should be to you and yours.

Figures Show Growth of English Language

The amazing growth of the English language, surpassing that of any other during the past 100 years, is illustrated by statistics given by the Neue Auercher Zeitung. English was spoken by less than 20,000,000 persons in 1850, the statistics showed, while at present no less than 100,000,000 people speak it natively, while an additional 60,000,000 understand it but do not consider it their own native tongue. The newspaper says the rate of increase has far outstripped all other languages, and that there is no part of the world where English is not now spoken. German was spoken by 32,000,000 persons a century ago and now by between 50,000,000 and 60,000,000 persons, the statistics showed. The use of the Dutch languages increased from 6,300,000 to 15,000,000; Swedish from 3,200,000 to 7,500,000; and Danish from 2,100,000 to 5,000,000. The growth of the Latin languages, on the other hand has been less rapid, with Italian slightly in the lead. Spoken by 21,000,000 a century ago, that language is now spoken by 4,000,000, while Spanish, which was second in increase, was used by 25,000,000 a century ago and now is used by 50,000,000. French, the language of diplomacy, has increased only from 32,400,000 to 45,000,000, but it is understood by an additional 75,000,000 foreigners.

THEATRES

At The Grand
Olive Borden and Huntley Gordon are starred in "Sinners of Love" which picture appears at the Grand Theatre Wednesday only.

The story is of the adventures of a small town girl who comes to the big city to make good. And then the trend of affairs drifts until she is found helping a man lose his money in a gambling den. The show is filled with thrills. A Western Featurette is also listed.

At The Met

With the coming of sound to the screen drama there were many who foretold the climax in the careers of the silent screen favorites. But if they included Richard Dix in the category of those who would decline in popularity when sound became a fixture in the movie theatre, they were wrong, all wrong.

For Dix proved that he is a remarkable "find" for the talkies in his first picture, "Nothing But the Truth," which gained him immeasurably great renown as an audible actor almost overnight.

His second film, the 100 per cent talking Paramount production, "The Wheel of Life," comes to Met theatre Wednesday for a three days' run and it brings Dix forward in an even stronger light as one of the great actors of the speaking silver-screen.

"The Wheel of Life" is dashingly, vivid, romantic drama and Dix, as the central figure, is the personification of vigorous, soldierly manhood. The plot is woven about love in a military outpost of the British government in India. It concerns the love which develops between Dix and Esther Ralston, who plays the role of the young and unhappy wife of the elderly O. P. Heggie, commanding officer of the military post. Dix rescues Esther and a party of friends when they are beset by hostile native tribesmen, who surround a monastery of the Buddhist priests where the Easterners have taken refuge. The climax is an amazing and breath-taking one.

At The Cliftona

An authentic replica of an original Viking ship was utilized in the filming of "The Viking," Technicolor's epic production of Viking days done entirely in colors and released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with sound synchronization, now playing at the Cliftona Theatre.

The Gokstad, a Viking ship of the Tenth Century, was discovered in the year 1880, buried in the mud close by the city of Sandefjord, Norway. Reclaimed from its muddy resting place by the government after a period of a thousand years, it was found to be the funeral ship of the Norse King Olaf Gierstad—ALV.

Build entirely of oak, the Gokstad had withstood the ravages time since the year 900 A. D. The furnishings and fittings, mostly of brass, were found to be in good condition, while the bier of King Olaf was well preserved. This was removed and given another resting place in a monumental mausoleum befitting a King and placed on exhibition in the historical museum of the Oslo University in the capitol of Norway.

A controversy arose over the removal of the body of the King, Olaf Gierstad—ALV, and through

SALT CREEK-TWP.

The grades and high school have been making preparations for a Thanksgiving program, Wednesday afternoon, and by the time this is read the program will have been given. A full program including all the grades is out of the ordinary, but we anticipate an enjoyable event.

The law class has been conducting a trial. One high school student was arrested by Lucia Kreider and was brought by Constable Pauline Neff before Justice of Peace Mable Valentine for hearing. He was prosecuted by Attorney Mary Horn and defended by Attorney Lloyd Armstrong. Eye witnesses were present in the persons of Gertrude Stevens, Goldie Julian, Muriel Julian, Ruth Fetherolf and Elizabeth Heffner. The prosecution and defense were well handled by the two attorneys and the judge was equal to the occasion. It was an interesting and profitable experience for the class. The defendant was found guilty and sentence will be imposed in keeping with the offense. Practice for the grade opera to be given the week before Christmas is proceeding favorably. It is something new and will be an agreeable surprise. The exact date and details of the program will be announced after the Thanksgiving vacation.

The parent Teachers meeting last Wednesday night was a fine success in attendance, program, interest and social activity. Miss Agnes Schaal, a very graceful and capable president, called the more than 120 paid up members to order and after the dispatch of the regular business had Judge E. A. Brown of Circleville presented as the speaker of the evening. As usual Judge Brown had a message which was appreciatively received by the audience. At the close of the program, Miss Schaal directed us to the basement where a banquet was served by the losing side in the membership drive led by Mrs. Flo Fricce, the captain of the losing side, to Mrs. Blanche Reichelderfer, the captain of the winning team. It was a royal occasion. Flatcreek girls regaled themselves with New Holland on the Tarlton floor. The New Holland boys captured the prize by a 16 to 15 score while the Saltcreek girls regaled themselves with the decisive count of 24 to 12. The scores about represent the merits of the teams. Saltcreek boys outplayed their opponents but made enough unnecessary fouls to lose the game. Limited athletics have a place in education. If the standards and requirements are kept high, students try to attain the goal which means good physical condition, skill, endurance, poise, judgment and good school work.

Wednesday evening of this week Saltcreek boys and girls play Gibsonville boys and girls on the Tarlton floor. On Friday, Dec. 6, we go to Pickaway to meet the two strong teams there. Morrison, one of our truck drivers is prepared to take a load of rooters at small cost.

Take Care of Your Kidneys!

One should not neglect kidney and bladder irregularities. Too many people sacrifice health by failing to heed the early danger signals of kidney disorders. Even minor irregularities should be dealt with promptly. A drowsy, listless feeling; lameness and stiffness; constant backache and bladder irregularities are often timely warnings. Don't neglect them. To promote normal kidney action and assist your kidneys in cleansing your blood of poisonous wastes, use Doan's Pills. Find That Chuckwalla Has Dainty Appetite

It is not always the loveliest creature that feeds on the daintiest diet. The chuckwalla lizard of the Southwest the second largest lizard in the United States, is not exactly a stage beauty among the animals, yet his choice appetite runs very strongly to flowers. A specimen captured in the Grand Canyon had in its stomach 113 over heads of three species of composite plants and three flowers of the yellow bean bush. These specimens were found in the chuckwalla. In his second stomach—the reptile has two—was another mass of flower tissue, but more advanced in digestion. The chuckwalla has for years been a favorite dish among the Indians, and many a lost prospector has overcome the white man's repugnance to eating "lizards," to find with surprise that this big lizard is made of good meat. After the recently captured specimen had fiddled up its skin for museum purposes, its flesh was roasted and eight persons had a chance to find out what chuckwalla meat tasted like.

Some Discomforts in Early Railroad Travel

When railroading in this country was in the experimental stage, now more than a century ago, a traveler related in an article published in paper of the time how he had to wait on the platform of the station at Charleston, S. C., for several hours after the scheduled departure of his train so the engineer and fireman could test their engine by running it back and forth.

As he waited, passengers were seated in the cars, the engine being run back and forth until it was well under way, but even if he had gone down and before he had got down, the knots were given to the furnace door, steam was let off and the train was on its way again, but stopping every so often to get up steam.

ONCE you use Kelly REGISTERED Balloons you'll never be satisfied with any other tires. Size for size they are even larger and sturdier than the regular Kelly line. The tread is much thicker and is carried further down the sidewalls so that the possibility of puncture is negligible. There is more rubber between the plies, and the seven-inch size has two extra plies of cord. Furthermore, for your protection, each

Local Court Season Opens Thanksgiving

CLUB MEETS NEWARK Y. M. C. A. IN THIS SEASON'S PREMIERE

After three weeks of hard practice in order to get into shape for their opening basketball game of the season, the Circleville Athletic club toppers announce themselves as ready to take on all opposition and will get that first taste of opposition Thanksgiving evening against the Newark Y. M. C. A. at the club gymnasium.

The Lutheran church Brotherhood, the Grant Flying Clouds and teams of scrubs augmented by college stars have been used as opposition by the club in their practice sessions. Although on most occasions the club encountered little trouble the scrimmages were used to good advantage.

Manager Joe Lynch of the C. A. C. has not yet announced his starting lineup although it is expected Steele, Gordon, Parks, Meriman and Robinson will be the five to take the floor at the bat-off.

Several other good basketball players are available in Ralph Wallace, Howard White and Dorcy Courtwright.

The strength of Monte Beaver's Newark club is not exactly known. In past years Beaver has brought a fast club to Circleville and naturally it is thought this year's team will be just as good as any other. The game will be the first for the Newark team, as well as for the club.

The big contest will get under way between 8:30 and 9 p. m.

FAST PRELIM

A fast preliminary has been booked which is bound to bring out its quota of fans when Sam Grant's Flying Cloud courtmen tackle the Chillicothe St. Mary's five.

The Clouds have played three games, and in each has been returned the victor by a goodly margin. The Emery club, Washington-twp school and Jackson-twp school have been defeated by the Clouds.

The Cloud lineup will probably consist of Weller and Barnes at forwards, Liston at center, and Maloney and Glitt at guards.

St. Mary's will be opening her season with the game here and is expected to put up one hot battle.

There is no football played at St. Mary's with the result that the squad has been practicing basketball for the past month. Many Chillicothe followers of the team are expecting to make the trip.

Ten men make up the St. Mary's first squad. They are: Hirsch and Dennis, center; Michaels, F. Edinger, T. Edinger and Kathe, guards; Garret, Burke, Schobee.

Harding Star of Harvard against Yale Near Death from Injuries of Game

Victor M. Harding, Harvard's star against Yale in last Saturday's game, is in a critical condition in the Stillman Infirmary, Boston, Mass. In a third-quarter scrimmage, Harding received a bad blow just below the stomach and was taken to the hospital from the game suffering severe pains. His injury has been diagnosed as rupture of the spleen. Grave fears are entertained for his recovery.

Weatherwise Spider

The spider seems to possess an uncanny knowledge of the coming weather and it makes use of this in the manipulation of its webs. If the day is to be fair and quiet the strands supporting the web are far flung. It is not an uncommon thing to find that, from the center of a web to the point where the extremities of the threads are attached will be three feet or even more. This is, of course, an advantage to have the web as fully extended as possible, for then the chances that flies will blunder into the entanglement are increased. Some hours in advance of the coming of wind and rain the spider will be hard at work shortening the strands which support the web.

Singing Sands

No satisfactory explanation is given as to what causes singing sands to make the sounds they do. Singing sands are found in various localities under such different conditions that no general conclusion has been reached.

Sound Advice

Solon gave the following advice: "Consider your honor as a gentleman of more weight than an oath. Never tell a lie. Pay attention to matters of importance."—Diogenes Laertius (circa A. D. 200.) "Solon."

Severe Old Laws

Back in the Seventeenth century when Boston was only a town, one of the laws enacted by the General court provided that suicides were not to be interred in a burial ground, but by the side of a public highway, with a cartload of stones dumped on the grave as a mark of public contempt.

Other laws of the time prohibited Christmas celebration for fear of disorders, and forbade cards and dice under penalty of $25 fine. Marriage to one's deceased wife's sister was forbidden; common scolds were punished by ducking them in salt water. Sabbath desecrators were confined in a cage in front of the town house, and a hole was burned in the tongue of the blasphemer with a hot iron.—Detroit News.

Upper Canada college, founded in 1829, famous Canacinn school for boys, has celebrated its hundredth birthday. As of yore, the original college bell calls Upper Canada college boys "unwillingly to school." As its familiar name floats across the playgrounds it is a reminder that it has been ringing since the days when Toronto, now a city of 600,000, was the town of York, with 2,511 inhabitants and the whole of Canada, then ruled by George IV, was comprised within the boundaries of the present provinces of Ontario and Quebec.

SECTIONAL GRIDIRON CHAMPS FACE RUBICON ON GRIDIRON

By DAVIS J. WALSH
NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Pittsburgh, their apparent to the eastern title; Tennessee and Tulane, bellwethers of the south; Utah, the king of the Rockies and St. Mary's the west coast's nominee for national honors, will face their rubicon of the 1929 season tomorrow.

The Rubicon, as you know, is a modest, little stream, very innocent to the unwary eye; yet to cross it, even figuratively, is a step no less fateful today than it was thousands of years ago when Caesar stood on the soil of Tuscany and looked across with a calculating eye at the legions of Pompey, therefore, to say that Pompey, therefore, to say that Pitt Tennessee, Tulane, Utah and St. Mary's are to cross their Rubicon tomorrow is to concede that the climax of their careers is at hand.

Each is undefeated and united to date, thus making rank with Notre Dame, Purdue, Texas Christian and other national leaders. Each draws a live one for its opponent on this, the final day of their schedules, although it must be admitted that most of the opposition could be better without becoming downright good.

Pitt, for instance, ought to beat Penn state, Tennessee looks to be two touchdowns better than Kentucky; Tulane, if it is as good as everybody says it is, is too good for Louisiana state; Utah undoubtedly is a 2 to 1 choice over Utah Aggies.

This leaves only St. Mary's, the one team in the country with goal line and goal post uncrossed. If it finishes that way against Oregon tomorrow, the whole country will have to admit what California has been claiming all along—that St. Mary's is as good as the next and better than 99 in every hundred.

Bible Washington Held

A Masonic lodge of New York city, St. John's, has in its possession a highly prized memento of the first President. It is the Bible on which General Washington took the oath of office on the balcony of old Federal hall, in Wall street. On that momentous occasion, so the story goes, the Bible had been forgotten and it was necessary to find one on short notice. Maj. Robert Morton, the officer commanding the regiment of honor, was sent on the mission. Being a member of St. John's Masonic lodge, Major Morton brought himself of the lodge-rooms and promptly returned to his post with the book. It has been offered to other Presidents for use at inaugural ceremonies. President Harding accepted the offer.

Franklin's Burial Place

Benjamin Franklin was not buried in the old Canaan burying ground in Boston where his portrait is because his life was spent for the most part in Philadelphia. It was the home of his heart, and he was buried in that city.

Odd Biblical Error

The "Vineyard Bible" was the name given to an edition of the Bible published at Oxford, England, in 1717. It was so called because of a printer's error. The head line over Luke 22 contained the word "vineyard" for "vineyard."

Test is Ordinary Duties

All higher motives, ideals, conceptions, sentiments in a man are of no account if they do not come forward to strengthen him for the better discharge of duties which devolve upon him in the ordinary affairs of life.—Beecher.

Scientific "Follies"

The so-called seven follies of science are the quadrature of the circle; the duplication of the cube; trisection of the angle; perpetual motion; transmutation of metals; extraction of mercury; the elixir of life.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and lessens the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

How do you choose?

Every time you make a purchase you make a choice. Buying a certain product may be so much a matter of habit that you don't realize you are choosing. But the fact remains that in accepting one brand of goods you are always rejecting others; and the satisfaction you get from what you buy depends on the knowledge of quality and values that guides your selection.

How do you know which bed-sheets, or which roofing material, or which radio will give you service you require? You can't personally test everything you buy and compare it with all the other products in its class. But there is a way to find out which brand fits your needs.

The people who are most successful in their buying—who achieve the highest percentage of satisfaction from the things they own and use—are those who consistently read the advertising columns, and buy consistently advertised goods.

Choosing isn't just "guessing" when you follow the guidance of the advertisements.

YOU CAN DEPEND ON ADVERTISED GOODS.

Not Original With Twain
For long we chuckled over... a witicism of a very eminent American, now passed from this life and deservedly remembered for his sense of humor and his literary aptitude. We do not know that he ever claimed the saying as original, but it has been fastened to him as the own invention. Yet in an ancient book, pointed in Edinburgh in the Seventeenth century, "Anaphorisms New and Old," we find it, thus set down:
"One was saying, that his great-grandfather, and grandfather, and father, died at sea. Said another that heard him: And I were as you. I would never come at sea. Why (said he) where did your great-grandfather and grandfather and father die? He answered: where, but in their beds? Said the other: And I were as you, I would never come in bed."—Preston Herald.

Berlin's Last Windmills
Among Berlin's vanished landmarks are its windmills and water wheels. Once numerous, there are now only two left. In the heart of the Tiergarten stand the remains of a water wheel, which is said to have been built more than 300 years ago, but which was last operated in 1837. Twenty feet off the road to the suburb of Zehlendorf is the last surviving windmill of the capital. It is still in fairly good condition, although it has been several decades since its huge blades last turned lazily in the wind.

Have Drops From Sky

A story which reads like one of Baron Munchausen's is published in the Swedish papers of a farmer who, while cutting hay, saw a hare drop from the sky. This actually happened at Lockraesk, in the parish of Sordele. Looking up to see where the hare came from the farmer saw an eagle which apparently had found its prey too heavy and dropped it.—London Sunday Observer.
